Rotating Internship positions with focus on Emergency and Critical Care

The Tierspital excited to announces Rotating Internship positions with focus on Emergency and Critical Care Medicine. Starting date will be negotiable

The 1-year program is designed to train candidates in the practice of small animal emergency and critical care as well as Internal Medicine and Surgery. The Program is recognized both by AVMA (American Veterinary Medical Association) as well as FVH and it provides a stepping stone to further specialty training (Residency).

Supervised training will take place in the small animal emergency service and intensive care of the Tierspital under the direct mentorship of ACVECC/ECVECC/ECVS/ECVIM Diplomates. The emergency department and intensive care unit are fully equipped to provide state-of-the-art care for emergent and critically ill patients.

Interns participate in daily patient rounds, weekly journal and book clubs, and weekly rounds and seminars. All interns are expected to provide a state-of-the-art case presentation to the Tierspital community during the course of their employment. Publication opportunities are encouraged and supported.

Factors favouring an applicant's acceptance to the program include excellent communication and interpersonal relationship skills. A mandatory requirement is the knowledge of German language, spoken and written at least at B2 level.
